EMAIL	MOO: INTRO EMAIL From: Dr. Walden Shyre Subject: Automated message... Welcome User, I'm sorry I could not be there to greet you in person, but I wanted to thank you for accepting this position as my research assistant, it means a great deal to me. In light of what you may have seen or heard in the media, I'm sure you have a lot of questions, including some about the contents of the envelope. The answers will come...but right now I need your help, and I need you to trust me! What I can tell you is that I'm working on something important. I left a week ago to take steps to ensure that the research stays safe. It's a treasure of unbelievable wealth and the key to unlocking it has been carefully hidden. I've left the task of finding the key to you. This computer interface maintains an encrypted connection to my personal server, which I no longer have access to. There is only one other like it and I gave it to an old friend and colleague Dr. Jordan Greenwood. I trust her and she'll be a great resource in helping you find the key. Through this interface you will have access to a number of objects and tools that will help you to piece together the clues to finding the key. To help you on your way, I've left these four objects: a coin, a cork, a block and a letter. Your missions can be found under the "Map" tab. Within each mission you will be able to access objects from the "Objects" tab and tools from the "Tools" tab. You can examine objects and interact with both objects and tools in the "Work" tab. If you need to gather more information, use your browser to search the internet. I'm not sure how this will all end, but unlocking the code to the key to my research is all up to you. For both of our safety, I will not be able to contact you again until this is all over. In the meantime, I have set up a series of automated emails to help you get started. Good luck and be careful. Yours truly, Walden A.
